

Phone Cards Donated to Red Cross by Phonecards.com

Phonecards.com is making a generous contribution of 5,000 phone cards to the American Red Cross. The phone cards will go into a holding cell and will be available for the victims of future natural and national disasters.

Houston, Texas (PRWEB) February 1, 2005 - - Phonecards.com has announced they will make a charitable donation of 5,000 pre-paid phone cards to the American Red Cross. These phone cards will be saved for use by the survivors of future disasters. With services across the country, the Red Cross responds to natural and national disasters every year. Phone cards for the families affected by these disasters will be a welcome gift from Phonecards.com.

Rohit Krishan of Phonecards.com says, "It is so wonderful to be able to help out these disaster survivors. We know they need to stay connected to their extended families and they have to be able to have access to people and companies in order to get their feet back on the ground. We're proud that these phone cards are going to be a huge help in making that happen."

Events like the recent devastating Tsunami remind everyone of simple needs. With billions of dollars in property losses, millions of people living without power, and thousands without homes, the last thing on a victims' mind should be how they will be able to make a phone call. For the next disaster, Phonecards.com hopes to ease victims' minds and help them to contact their loved ones more easily.

Phonecards.com is well-known for providing inexpensive long-distance rates. Their phone cards can even be used with cell phones at no extra charge.
